"Our speech therapy provider [] is amazing. She is GREAT with the students, she does an excellent job with all of the paperwork and IEP meetings, and she is extremely reliable. Also, TinyEYE checks in a lot to make sure all is going well. [] I did not believe that virtual speech therapy could be effective until we tried it."

Student Mental Health Continues to Worsen

What's the Problem?

1 in 6 children in the United States have a mental health disorder.

50% of children with mental health disorders are not receiving the appropriate care and treatment they need.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), approximately 1 in 6 children in the United States have a mental health disorder. However, studies suggest that up to 50% of children with mental health disorders are not receiving the appropriate care and treatment they need.

Additionally, the Center for Disease Control's (CDC) Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance Data Summary & Trends Report: 2011-2021 noted that nearly all indicators of poor adolescent mental health and suicidal thoughts and behaviors increased from 2011 to 2021.

Most of these studies utilize data from before (or during) the COVID-19 pandemic. Since the start of the pandemic, the CDC found that “more than 1 in 3 high school students experienced poor mental health during the pandemic and nearly half of students felt persistently sad or hopeless.” Increased levels of stress, anxiety, depression, and mood disorders, worsening of pre-existing mental health conditions, and barriers to accessing mental health care are just a small selection of the impacts the pandemic has had on students.

Poor mental health in both children and adolescents can impact many areas of their lives, often going hand in hand with other health and behavioral issues down the road.

What's the TinyEYE Solution?

The CDC has since said that school-based activities "can make a profound difference in the lives of teens." Early diagnosis and appropriate services for children and their families can make a huge difference in the lives of children who struggle with their mental health.

In light of the studies done on the impact of mental health struggles on children, the U.S. Department of Education has announced "awards of more than $188 million across 170 grantees in over 30 states to increase access to school-based mental health services and to strengthen the pipeline of mental health professionals in high-needs districts." More resources are available to schools than ever before!

"TinyEYE Services has helped us in filling some crucial student needs in mental health. Our students can conveniently log on from school or home to speak with a therapist. Students have received assistance concerning academic stressors, relationships, anxiety, and depression. TinyEYE is convenient for our students and flexible when working with school administration. TinyEYE has been a wonderful community partner in our student wellness program."
